Introduction

Under the Communications Act 2003 ("the Act"), Ofcom has a duty to set standards for broadcast content to secure the standards objectives¹. Ofcom also has a duty to ensure that On Demand Programme Services ("ODPS") comply with certain standards requirements set out in the Act².

Ofcom reflects these requirements in its codes and rules. The Broadcast and On Demand Bulletin reports on the outcome of Ofcom's investigations into alleged breaches of its codes and rules, as well as conditions with which broadcasters licensed by Ofcom are required to comply. The codes and rules include:

- a) Ofcom's Broadcasting Code ("the Code") for content broadcast on television and radio services licensed by Ofcom, and for content on the BBC's licence fee funded television, radio and on demand services.
- b) the Code on the Scheduling of Television Advertising ("COSTA"), containing rules on how much advertising and teleshopping may be scheduled on commercial television, how many breaks are allowed and when they may be taken.
- c) certain sections of the BCAP Code: the UK Code of Broadcast Advertising, for which Ofcom retains regulatory responsibility for television and radio services. These include:
 - the prohibition on 'political' advertising;
 - 'participation TV' advertising, e.g. long-form advertising predicated on premium rate telephone services – notably chat (including 'adult' chat), 'psychic' readings and dedicated quiz TV (Call TV quiz services); and
 - gambling, dating and 'message board' material where these are broadcast as advertising³.
- d) other conditions with which Ofcom licensed services must comply, such as requirements to pay fees and submit information required for Ofcom to carry out its statutory duties. Further information can be found on Ofcom's website for television and radio licences.
- e) Ofcom's Statutory Rules and Non-Binding Guidance for Providers of On-Demand Programme Services for editorial content on ODPS (apart from BBC ODPS). Ofcom considers sanctions for advertising content on ODPS referred to it by the Advertising Standards Authority ("ASA"), the co-regulator of ODPS for advertising, or may do so as a concurrent regulator.

Other codes and requirements may also apply to broadcasters, depending on their circumstances. These include the requirements in the BBC Agreement, the Code on Television Access Services (which sets out how much subtitling, signing and audio description relevant licensees must provide), the Code on Electronic Programme Guides, the Code on Listed Events, and the Cross Promotion Code.

It is Ofcom's policy to describe fully television, radio and on demand content. Some of the language and descriptions used in Ofcom's Broadcast and On Demand Bulletin may therefore cause offence.

Decision

Fox News is a news channel originating in the US. The Licence was held by Fox News Network LLC. It ceased to broadcast in the UK on 29 August 2017 and surrendered its Licence to Ofcom on 1 November 2017. Although the channel has ceased to broadcast and is no longer a licensed television service falling under Ofcom's jurisdiction, Ofcom has decided that publication of this short form decision is appropriate to ensure there is a complete compliance record and to facilitate public understanding of the Code.

This case concerns "due impartiality".

In reaching this Decision, we have taken into account the fact that Fox News is a US news channel, directed at US audiences, which is available in the UK. The people who watch it in the UK are aware that it is a US channel and their expectations are different. It is not a main source of news in the UK. However, we were also mindful that, in our view, this particular programme dealt with major matters relating to current public policy that, as well as being of international significance, were of particular relevance and significance to UK viewers.

Hannity is a current affairs discussion programme. On 31 January 2017, it covered President Donald Trump's Executive Order issued on 27 January 2017 restricting travel from seven majority-Muslim countries. Ofcom considered the programme under Code rules 5.9 (adequate representation of alternative views in 'personal view' or discussion programmes), 5.11 (due impartiality on matters of major political and industrial controversy and major matters relating to current public policy) and 5.12 (inclusion of an appropriately wide range of significant views when dealing with matters of major political and industrial controversy and major matters relating to current public policy).

Ofcom considered the Order to be a "major" matter. There was intense international and UK interest in it at the time. Although a domestic US policy, its application was likely to impact non-US citizens, including in the UK. It also attracted scrutiny as an early signal of how the Trump Administration would approach domestic and international affairs. On the day before the broadcast thousands of people joined protests in several UK cities against the travel ban, MPs held an emergency debate at Westminster and more than 1.5 million people had signed a petition calling for Mr Trump's state visit to the UK to be cancelled.

We went on to consider if due impartiality had been preserved by ensuring alternative viewpoints were sufficiently reflected. The opening monologue featured several video clips of public figures reacting critically to the Order. However, these views were briefly represented in pre-recorded videos and repeatedly dismissed or ridiculed by the presenter without sufficient opportunity for the contributors to challenge or otherwise respond to the criticism directed at them. During the rest of the programme, the presenter interviewed various guests who were all prominent supporters of the Trump administration and highly critical of those opposed to the Order. The presenter consistently voiced his enthusiastic support for the Order and the Trump Administration.

Ofcom acknowledged that viewers were likely to expect Hannity to address controversial issues from a perspective that is generally more supportive of the US Republican Party. However, the likely audience expectations did not provide sufficient contextual justification to outweigh the numerous highly critical statements made about people who had opposed the Order, coupled with the clear support being expressed for the policies of President Trump.

Breaches of Rules 5.9, 5.11 and 5.12

Tucker Carlson Tonight Fox News, 25 May 2017, 07:00

Decision

Fox News is a news channel originating in the US. The Licence was held by Fox News Network LLC. It ceased to broadcast in the UK on 29 August 2017 and surrendered its Licence to Ofcom on 1 November 2017. Although the channel has ceased to broadcast and is no longer a licensed television service falling under Ofcom's jurisdiction, Ofcom has decided that publication of this short form decision is appropriate to ensure there is a complete compliance record and to facilitate public understanding of the Code.

This case concerns "due impartiality".

In reaching this Decision, we have taken into account the fact that Fox News is a US news channel, directed at US audiences, which is available in the UK. The people who watch it in the UK are aware that it is a US channel and their expectations are different. It is not a main source of news in the UK. However, we were also mindful that, in our view, this particular programme dealt with major matters relating to current public policy that, as well as being of international significance, were of particular relevance and significance to UK viewers.

Tucker Carlson Tonight is an opinion and commentary programme. On 25 May 2017, it discussed the reaction of the UK authorities to the Manchester terrorist attack on 22 May 2017. Ofcom considered the programme under Code rules 5.9 (adequate representation of alternative views in 'personal view' or discussion programmes), 5.11 (due impartiality on matters of major political and industrial controversy and major matters relating to current public policy) and 5.12 (inclusion of an appropriately wide range of significant views when dealing with matters of major political and industrial controversy and major matters relating to current public policy).

Ofcom considered the responses of the UK Government and authorities to the terrorist attack in Manchester on 22 May 2017 and public policy in relation to terrorism to be a major matter both domestically and internationally.

The programme included highly critical statements about: Theresa May; the Deputy Mayor of Manchester, Baroness Hughes; the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester, Ian Hopkins; the UK Government; and the UK authorities, including accusations that particular individuals and public bodies had done nothing to: counter terrorism; stop radicalisation; protect citizens from terrorism; or protect "thousands of underage girls" from rape and abuse. Further, about public leaders: that their inaction was motivated by political correctness; they valued how people saw them over the lives of children; and they were forcing an "official lie" on citizens, which was "totalitarian" and "wicked". There was no reflection of the views of the UK Government or any of the authorities or people criticised, which we would have expected given the nature and amount of criticism of them in the programme. The presenter did not challenge the views of his contributors, instead, he reinforced their views.

Ofcom considered that viewers were likely to have expected the programme to comment critically on various political targets, which in this case included the UK Government and UK authorities more generally. However, we considered that these contextual factors were not sufficient to remove the need for the programme to also reflect significant alternative viewpoints, and treat these with due weight.

F-Stop: Lady Margaret Notts TV, 20 August 2017, 20:30

Introduction

Notts TV is a local television service for Nottingham and its surrounding areas. The licence is held by Notts TV Limited ("Notts TV" or "the Licensee").

F-Stop is a series showcasing short films produced and directed by local filmmakers. This episode, entitled F-Stop: Lady Margaret, included a nine-minute short film along with footage of the film's director, Deborah Haywood, talking about her career and her childhood which had inspired the film.

We received a complaint about the broadcast of offensive language and sexual themes in this pre-watershed programme.

A warning, in text and voiceover, was broadcast at the beginning of the programme stating:

"WARNING: This programme contains strong language, adult humour and scenes of a violent or sexual nature".

The film featured a young girl called Sadie who, after accepting a car ride with two older boys (Joe and Danny), was driven into the woods and coerced into a sexually humiliating "striptease" act and threatened that if she did not agree they would leave her stranded in the woods alone at night.

Sadie, Joe and Danny were shown sitting in the car. Joe and Danny tried to scare Sadie by reciting a story of the ghost of Lady Margaret. Joe then suggested to Sadie that they play a game of strip poker:

Joe: "Look, are you going to make this worth our while?"

Sadie: "Can we go home now? You're boring me".

Joe: "Let's play a game. Let's play, err strip poker, like, without the cards. You strip and we poke ya [laughs]".

Sadie: "Let's, erm, go for another spin".

Joe: "Aw, do you not wanna to play?"

Sadie: "I don't play shit games!".

Joe: "[becoming agitated] You know there is a name for girls like you and it's not Paris [an alias Sadie gave when she first met the boys] It's prick-teaser".

Sadie: "Yeah, but you need a prick to get prick teased! [Danny laughs]".

Joe: "[shouting] Yo, I can black your eye out with this fucker".

Sadie: "Yeah right. Can we go now then? I've got homework".

Joe: "I'll tell you what. We'll take you home if you get your tits out".

Sadie: "[taking out her mobile phone] No thanks! [As Sadie dialled, Joe snatched the phone] Can I have my phone back?..."

Joe: "Why, what's it worth?"

Sadie: "[As Sadie struggled to take her phone off Joe] Give it me back. Give it me back. Give it me back. Give it me back."

Danny: "...I'd bet you get them out for me".

Sadie: "I don't think so!"

Sadie was then shown struggling to leave the car as Joe called her a "fucking bitch". Sadie, standing outside the car, appeared scared and banged on the car window to be let back in the car and taken home. Joe, having locked the car door, laughed as he opened the car window:

Sadie: "I wanna go home".

Joe: "Get your tits out first!".

Sadie: "Please let me back in the car. I want to go home".

Joe: "Shall I ring mum? Yeah here we go, mum, mum. Shall we phone mum?"

Sadie: "No! No! No!"

Joe: "Shall I phone mum and say you're sucking my cock? Sadie is sucking the cock mum! Look, are you going to do it? No? [Sadie's crying] Or do you want to stay here late at night, stay here with Lady Margaret?"

Sadie: "[Scared] Please let me go home".

Joe: "Are you going to do it? No? Fuck it! Right start the car Danny we're off".

Sadie: "[crying] — No! Please don't! Please don't!"

Joe: "Yeah? Well strip then. Strip then, strip then, strip then".

The following sequence of shots, accompanied by menacing music, showed a distressed Sadie hesitatingly starting to undress in the darkness, as Joe commented: "Fucking hell we're in...". Joe then started to whistle "The Stripper", and laughingly asked Sadie to "shake her bum a bit" and commented: "she's stripping...fucking hell".

As a tearful Sadie undressed, Danny was shown looking uncomfortable. A shot of Joe was shown, from the waist up, appearing to masturbate. Danny then became aware of Joe and reached into the back seat to hit him:

Danny: "What are you fucking doing, you fucking pig...give her the fucking phone now...I swear give her the fucking phone back now" [and then to Sadie]: "Get in the fucking car now..."

The film concluded with close up shots of Danny looking upset as he drove, Sadie distressed, and Joe sulking in the back of the car.

There were 14 instances of the word "fuck" or "fucking" and a further 10 instances of other examples of offensive language (e.g. "cock", "tits", "prick", "prickteaser" and "bitch").

We considered that this material raised issues under the following Code rules:

- Rule 1.3: "Children must also be protected by appropriate scheduling from material that is unsuitable for them...";
- Rule 1.14: "The most offensive language must not be broadcast before the watershed";
- Rule 1.16: "Offensive language must not be broadcast before the watershed unless it is justified by the context. In any event, frequent use of such language must be avoided before the watershed"; and
- Rule 2.3: "In applying generally accepted standards, broadcasters must ensure that material which may cause offence is justified by the context...Appropriate information should also be broadcast where it would assist in avoiding or minimising offence".

We asked the Licensee for its comments about how the material complied with these rules.

Response

Notts TV acknowledged that the programme did contain language and themes which were unsuitable and inappropriate for broadcast before the watershed. It explained that the content had been scheduled and broadcast in error due to staff shortages.

Rules 1.3, 1.14 and 1.16

The Licensee stated that the harm and offence caused by the broadcast had been mitigated to a certain extent by: the time of the broadcast and its proximity to the watershed; the clear warning broadcast at the beginning of the programme; and that the programme was unlikely to attract a younger audience.

Rule 2.3

Notts TV considered that the introduction with the director, which prefaced the short film, and the end credits in which the director explained how the short film was inspired by her own experiences, served to provide appropriate information and "a degree of context".

Nonetheless, the Licensee acknowledged that the programme was scheduled inappropriately and apologised for any offence caused. Notts TV added that the matter had been raised and action had been taken with the individuals concerned. It also said that "further safeguards" had been introduced and "reminders issued" to staff on the seriousness of the matter.

Decision

Reflecting our duties under the Communications Act 2003¹, Section One of the Code requires that people under eighteen are protected from unsuitable material in programmes. Section Two of the Code requires that generally accepted standards are applied to the content of television services to provide adequate protection for members of the public from the inclusion and/or offensive material.

Ofcom takes account of the audience's and the broadcaster's right to freedom of expression set out in Article 10 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Rule 1.3

Rule 1.3 states that children must be protected by appropriate scheduling from material that is unsuitable for them. Appropriate scheduling is judged by a number of factors including: the nature of the content; the time of broadcast; and likely audience expectations.

Ofcom first considered whether this broadcast material was unsuitable for children.

In our view, the portrayal of a young girl in a vulnerable situation, being coerced into a sexually humiliating "striptease" act, in the presence of two older boys (one of whom was shown masturbating) as well as the repeated offensive, sexually aggressive, and threatening language used, particularly by the character Joe, was clearly unsuitable for children.

We then considered whether this material was appropriately scheduled. The programme was broadcast at 20:30 on Sunday and during the school summer holidays.

Ofcom strongly disagreed with the Licensee's view that the impact of the material would have been "mitigated to some extent" by the warnings, the time of broadcast close to the watershed, and its low appeal to child viewers. In view of the strength of the material, we considered that these factors were insufficient to ensure its appropriate scheduling.

Although warnings may be a useful guide to viewers in some circumstances, they are likely to have a limited impact on children who may be viewing unsupervised.

Parents and carers were unlikely to have expected this type of highly offensive and sexualised content to be broadcast at this time.

Ofcom took into account the Licensee's apology and that it had added "further safeguards" to its compliance process. However, this unsuitable material was not appropriately scheduled. Ofcom's Decision is that it breached Rule 1.3.

This rule states that the most offensive language must not be broadcast before the watershed on television.

Ofcom's research on offensive language² indicates that the word "fuck" and variations of it are considered by audiences to be among the most offensive language and should not be broadcast before the watershed.

Ofcom's Decision is that the repeated broadcast of the words "fuck" and "fucking" in this programme was therefore a clear breach of Rule 1.14.

Rule 1.16

Rule 1.16 states that offensive language must not be broadcast before the watershed unless it is justified by the context and that in any event, frequent use of such language must be avoided before the watershed.

We took into account Ofcom's research³ on offensive language which found that sexual terms such as "cock", "prick", "prickteaser" were considered "strong words" and were generally unacceptable before the watershed. Words such as "bitch" and "shit" were potentially unacceptable pre-watershed depending on the context.

We considered that ten instances of this offensive language broadcast during this nine-minute film constituted frequent use.

We therefore went on to consider whether this frequent use of offensive language was justified by the context.

As Ofcom's Guidance⁴ on Rule 1.16 makes clear, milder offensive language in the early evening may be acceptable, if for example it is mitigated by humour. In this case, however, the offensive language was used in a serious and threatening context.

Ofcom's Decision is that the frequent use of this offensive language was not justified by the context and was therefore in breach of Rule 1.16.

Rule 2.3

Rule 2.3 requires that broadcasters must ensure that the broadcast of potentially offensive content is justified by the context.

Ofcom first considered whether the material had the potential to cause offence.

This programme depicted the sexual humiliation of a young girl, a masturbation scene as well as repeated instances of the most offensive language and strong sexual offensive language. We therefore considered that this material had the potential to cause offence.

We then went on to consider whether the material was justified by the context.

The Licensee stated it had provided a "degree of context". The programme began with a clear warning, was broadcast close to the watershed and included a preface from the writer and director which provided some pre-broadcast information about the nature of the content.

However, Ofcom did not consider these factors sufficiently mitigated the potential offence caused by the broadcast of this content. In Ofcom's view the cumulative effect of the frequency the offensive language and the portrayal of a young girl being sexually humiliated was very likely to have exceeded adult viewers' expectations for a programme broadcast at this time on a local television channel. Ofcom took into account the Licensee's explanation that this material was broadcast in error, that it was scheduled inappropriately and its apology to viewers. However, Ofcom's Decision is that the programme exceeded generally accepted standards and is in breach of Rule 2.3.

Breaches of Rules 1.3, 1.14, 1.16 and 2.3.

Investigations Not in Breach

Here are alphabetical lists of investigations that Ofcom has completed between 16 and 29 October 2017 and decided that the broadcaster or service provider did not breach Ofcom's codes, rules, licence conditions or other regulatory requirements.

Complaints outside of remit

Here are alphabetical lists of complaints received by Ofcom that fell outside of our remit. This is because Ofcom is not responsible for regulating the issue complained about. For example, the complaints were about the content of television, radio or on demand adverts or an on demand service does not fall within the scope of regulation.

BBC First

A new BBC Royal Charter and Agreement was published in December 2016, which made Ofcom the new independent regulator of the BBC.

Under the BBC Agreement, Ofcom can normally only consider complaints about BBC programmes where the complainant has already complained to the BBC and the BBC has reached its final decision (the 'BBC First' approach).

The complaints in this table had been made to Ofcom before completing the BBC's complaints process.

Investigations List

If Ofcom considers that a broadcaster or service provider may have breached its codes, rules, licence condition or other regulatory requirements, it will start an investigation.

It is important to note that an investigation by Ofcom does not necessarily mean the broadcaster or service provider has done anything wrong. Not all investigations result in breaches of the codes, rules, licence conditions or other regulatory requirements being recorded.

Here are alphabetical lists of new investigations launched between 16 and 29 October 2017.
